This is the only volume of the collection without the general title "Histoire générale de Paris" at head of t.p.

Written in 1869. First printed, without the "Avant propos" and special index, in Alfred Franklin's Les anciennes bibliothèques de Paris, t. 2, 1873, p. 181-208, in which three plates (portraits of Turpin, Nicolas de Lirry and other founders) are usually absent, the number of impressions taken having proved insufficient to supply both issues. In the "Avant propos" the destruction of the library during the Commune, May 24, 1871, is referred to; no mention is made of this, by note or otherwise, in the earlier issue, and though the volume containing it has the imprint date 1873, that part of it seems to have been printed before 1871.

Tula, de los tiempos pertenecientes al pueblo de Santa Isabel Tula, que su pacífica posesión le dió el año de 1714 y hace relación á los que se dieron el año de 1539 expendiéndose el intérprete del idioma mexicano por S. M. los caracteres anti-guos que conservaban los Indios desde el año de 1438. Se tocan muchas noticias curiosas de nuestra América, el comenciamiento de los caracteres antiguos, con particularidad todos los sitios de este santuario de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, todo corroborado por escribano real en 25 fojas. México,

Introduction comprises brief history of printing in Russia and other Slavic countries.

The library was acquired by the St. Petersburg Imperial public library in 1830. A catalog of early Russian and Slavic books in the collection of Ivan N. Tarskii, prepared by Stroyev, was issued in 1836. In 1941 Stroyev published a bibliography of the early Russian and Slavic books not found either in the Tolstoi or Tarskii libraries.

"The sayings in these volumes are of varied authorship, having been gathered from Brahminical, Confucian and Buddhist sources, from the Gospels and the Epistles, and from the works of numerous thinkers both ancient and modern. Tolstol retold them in his own language, arranging them under suitable captions, and interspersing them with the expression of his own attitude to the problems of life." Tomlinson, Robert.

A plan for a practicable, easy, and constitutional method, of manning the royal navy, upon any emergency, without the usual mode of impressing seamen; rendered intelligible to those who are unacquainted with maritime affairs: illustrated by several tables, calculated to explain the whole. And most humbly submitted to the consideration of the ministry and of the legislature. By Lieutenant Tomlinson ... London, Printed for the author, by J. W. Pasham, 1774.

Tonkin, Mrs. Mary.

Facts dedicated to Her Majesty. The female spy; or Mrs. Tonkin's journey through France, in the late war, undertaken by the express order of the Rt. Hon. Charles James Fox, secretary of state. This pamphlet contains a particular narrative of the hardships, dangers, and distress, she met with, the various intelligences she furnished to government, the means by which it was obtained, and in what manner she escaped being taken. Not having received any compensation for her services from government—she submits her case to the candor and liberality of a generous public. (London: Printed for, and sold by the authoress, 1785.
